WINDOWSEAT

A ROOM WITHIN A ROOM.

Where does architecture stop and furniture begin?

The proliferation of public areas and open space office plans demands modern, smart furniture solutions that become part of the architecture while providing multi-functionality within a concentrated space. Windowseat offers a unique perspective by allowing individuals to choose when, where, and how they work.

Suitable for both public and private spaces, Windowseat is designed to be a comfortable refuge from the hustle and bustle of lobbies, airports, or noisy office environments. By taking architectural elements and applying them to a chair, designers Mike & Maaïke explored the idea of sub-architectural space - creating a "room-within-a-room", complete with its own unique perspective. Windowseat incorporates architectural concepts at an individual level, providing an element of privacy within an open environment while enabling the ability to switch between concentration and collaboration within a small footprint.
